

Dr. Timothy Carrigan is the chief nursing officer (CNO) and vice president of patient care services for Loyola University Medical Center. Loyola University Medical Center is a 547 bed, three time designated Magnet® designated, academic medical center, located in Maywood IL just west of Chicago. The medical center serves as a regional academic health system, and is home to Illinois' largest burn center, the Cardinal Bernardin Cancer Center, a Level I Trauma Center, and the William G. and Mary A. Ryan Center for Heart & Vascular Medicine. Additionally, Dr. Carrigan is a clinical assistant professor of nursing at Loyola University's Marcella Niehoff School of Nursing.

Prior to serving at Loyola, Tim was the chief administrative officer (CAO) for the Rush University System for Health's Heart & Vascular Institutes. As the CAO Tim was accountable and responsible for the system level executive leadership of heart and vascular strategy, program development, finances, and daily operations. Additionally, Tim served as the associate vice president (AVP) of nursing at Rush University Medical Center. Earlier in his career, Tim held leadership roles at both Advocate Aurora Health and the University of Illinois Hospital & Health Sciences System.

Tim has presented and published on a variety of topics, including: leadership talent management and development, as well as the connection between quality, safety, and the patient experience. Tim is the president of the Illinois Organization of Nurse Leaders and an active member of both the American Organization of Nurse Leaders and the American College of Healthcare Executives. He was also a board member for Heartland Alliance Health from 2017 to 2021.

Tim holds national certification as a nurse executive (NEA-BC) and is a fellow of the American College of Healthcare Executives (FACHE). Tim has received the Chicago Health Executive Forum (ACHE Chapter) Early Career Healthcare Executive award, the Illinois Nurses Foundation Top 40 Under 40 nurse leader award and is a Chicago Crain's Notable LGBTQ Executive. Tim received a PhD in nursing sciences from the University of Illinois at Chicago, and a BSN in nursing from Millikin University.
